

Innovative approaches to the development of veterinary educational online content

Stanikova, B. WikiVet; Short, N. Royal Veterinary College, University of London; and Gaitskell-Phillips, G WikiVet.

- The veterinary curriculum covers a wide range of topics and there are increasing requirements to address emerging and new areas.
- In recent years there has been an increasing reliance on online resources, that can be accessed from any location.
- The online medium offers a new opportunity to deliver additional information to parts of the curriculum which could benefit.
- WikiVet aims to fill these gaps, and with the support of commercial partners has begun to create comprehensive and fully reviewed subject modules for students and graduates.

Small Animal Dentistry

WikiVet has a new exciting resource dedicated to dentistry

Resources, developed in partnership with the specialist veterinary dental Lisa Meela (DipACVD, DipACVIM, MRCVDS) include:

- Encyclopaedic pages
- Dental Surgical Procedures
- Webinars and CPD
- Quizzes
- Downloadable reference materials

To polish up on your dental anatomy and brush up on your dentistry skills, visit www.wikivet.net

@WikiVet

Feline Behaviour

New comprehensive feline behaviour resource available through WikiVet

New freely available resources developed in conjunction with expert behaviourist Jon Bowers (B VetMed DipAS(CABC) MRCVDS), including:

- Over 40 encyclopaedic text pages
- Expert videos
- Interactive quiz

Visit www.wikivet.net to have a look at the new content and brush up on your feline behaviour knowledge.

@WikiVet

Small Animal Nutrition

Small Animal Nutrition on WikiVet

New freely available section on nutrition developed in conjunction with subject experts including Dan Chan (DVM, Dip. ACVECC, Dip. ACVN, MRCVDS) and Dr Richard Butterwick (BSc, PhD) formed of:

- Over 50 encyclopaedic text pages
- Nutrition glossary
- Multiple choice questions

Visit www.wikivet.net to have a look at the new nutrition section and improve your small animal nutrition knowledge.

@WikiVet

MARS petcare

If you would like to get involved in the project please contact:
wikimaster@wikivet.net

www.wikivet.net